

La Coordinadora Nacional de los Pueblos Indígenas de Panamá (COONAPIP) is leading this pilot initiative.

Panama is recognized internationally as a country with a superior legal framework on land regularization and indigenous rights. Yet traditional authorities are forced to spend an overwhelming amount of time and effort on the defense of their territorial rights.

The Tenure Facility is supporting COONAPIP to create an indigenous “legal clinic” that will advance the resolution of land titling, conflict resolution, and territorial governance issues faced by Panama’s indigenous territorial Congresses and Councils. This initiative also focuses on emerging opportunities for the titling of indigenous collective lands by building on recent agreements with the Panamanian government and favorable rulings in national and international courts.
